BANKER-MERCHANT RETURNS TO DOUGLAS

George F. Woodward Comes Back from Los Angeles with His Wife

George F. Woodward, a well known merchant, banker, mining man and stockman of Moctezuma, Sonora, Mexico, returned to Douglas yesterday from Los Angeles, where he had been for three months. Mr. Woodward was accompanied by his wife who was seriously ill at the time they left home to go to the coast. Mrs. Woodward was an inmate of the California hospital for several weeks during which time her life was despaired of.

When Mr. Woodward left Moctezuma, the town was surrounded by revolutionists and bands of robbers infested every section of the state of Sonora. On his return home he will find that section of Mexico peaceful and quiet again.

Mr. Woodward has resided in the state of Sonora, more than thirty years, and was at one time owner of a cattle ranch near Cananea, which he sold to the late Col. W. C. Green.

Mr. Woodward is one of the largest property owners in the state of Sonora and he is sure men who have good reasons to rejoice over the returned peace to that country.

KEEP AN ANIMAL IN SUBJECTION ALWAYS

The first principle that is taught a wild animal trainer is: "Never let an animal know his power." The moment he realizes that, he is likely to use his terrible teeth, or still more terrible, claws. It is a delusion to think that a wild animal is ever really "tamed." He acquiesces, through positiveness and recalcitrancy, an amenable to man's control, and for the time being drops his ferocity.

The very moment an animal realizes his power, his training is at an end. He grows insolent and in many instances seeks to wreak his vengeance on the trainer for what he considers are past outrages. This fear has gone and with the wild animal's knowledge comes power and his ferocity, long dormant, breaks out with double vigor.

Many animals do, of course, in fact injuries upon the trainers fairly often, but it is an unwise trainer who ever makes the slightest sign of pain or annoyance. Trainers have been known to give a flick of the whip but the result is always the same. The animal either promptly retaliates or indulges in a fit of sulks which he never forgets.

Whenever a trainer gets fairly contented, the best defense against a charging lion or tiger is to strike the animal on the nose, hitting up from under; but this is by no means an easy thing to do, as the animal will spring and strike with a degree of skill that would do credit to a clever prize fighter. Meanwhile, however, the trainer can be getting into a position that will give him an opportunity to escape.

The Al C. Barnes big three ring wild animal circus will exhibit in Warren on Tuesday, Nov. 12. This is by far the largest and most pretentious animal exhibition in the world. With the show is carried 350 educated animals which number includes a score of African lions.—Advertisement.

NEW COMEDY COMPANY GIVES MUCH PLEASURE

James P. Lee Aggregation Wins the Hearts of All Amusement Goers

"A Night Off" the opening bill of the James P. Lee Musical comedy

company held the boards at the Orpheum last night and it also held a large house in the pleasant throng of amusement and merriment through two acts and three scenes. Music and comedy were mixed in a way to satisfy the most exacting. The company is well remembered from its engagement here two years ago and many old favorites were recognized over the footlights.

James P. Lee occupied the major role and gave the comedy a tinge of originality that bettered the splendid role in which he was cast. He was ably supported by Madeline Lee, who by the way is his daughter. Others who aided in making the presentation effective were Leroy Kinslow and Homer Long. The latter's solos were bright spots in "A night Off." The numbers by the chorus were also unusually good.

Phillips in the role of the Chinese waiter was a distinct hit, both with his acting and his one-string fiddle stunt. The scenery of this act, the second, was better perfect and led the audience into a Chinatown chop suey house. The audience expressed its appreciation of the scene, painted and prepared by Art Phillips, with generous applause as the curtain rose.

Baby Angelus, in her song specialty, "Take an Example from Your Father" scored a hit all her own and will occupy a distinct niche in the hearts of Orpheum patrons. "A Night Off" will hold the boards tonight and tomorrow night. On Thursday night "The Runaways" will be the offering.
